THE ORANGE AND ALEXANDRIA RAILROAD COMPANY. - The conduct of this road has recently drawn some comment from a portion of the press, and as the articles referred to have been republished in this paper, we deem it due in justice to the authorities of the company, and to a correct appreciation of the matter, by the public, to submit the results of the in formation we have received on the subject.

The principal allegations brought against the company are that its facilities of transportation are inadequate to meet the requirements of business, and in its tariff of charges that dis criminating rates are imposed in favor of Baltimore, and against the trade of Alexandria .-Upon the first mentioned head it, is conceded that there is a temporary accumulation of freights in excess of the capacity of the rolling stock of the road. The magnitude of this business, as suddenly developed, was to some extent, not expected, and may, in some degree, be temporary at least. This is a contingency to which all carriers and transportation companies are at times liable under ordinary circumstances. But in this case it must be remembered that the Orange and Alexandria Railroad Company was limited in its financial ability, and could not make the large investment required for the purpose, upon an uncertainty. All Southern interests are more or less crippled, and their recuperation requires time. Besides, a large portion of the available means of the Orange Company had to be appropriated to the rebuilding of the Manassas line, a work in which the city of Alexandria at least has a large interest. This fact certainly calls for the exercise of some forbearance on the part of our people at present. It is due, however, to the officers of the Orange and Alexandria Railroad to say that notwithstanding the difficulties stated, as soon as the pressure of business arose as many additional engines and cars were ordered as their means, present and prospective, would allow. These purchases are costly and call for a large expenditure of capital, but it is believed in a short time the freighting capacity of the road will be equal to the wants of the community. In respect to the charge that discrimination is made in the rates favorable to Baltimore and against the trade of Alexandria, we are pleased to find it, upon investigation, without foundation. We have been furnished with a statement collated from the books of the General a comparison of rates from stations on the Orange and Alexandria Railroad to Alexandria and to Baltimore. This exhibit shows beyond question that in the rates imposed upon the transportation of every article mentioned, the interests of Alexandria have been fairly and fully protected. It the people of the interior choose to trade with Baltimore at higher rates of freight, it is a matter beyond the control of the railroad companies. Tonnage has another outlet from Alexandria to Baltimore by that cheapest of all modes of transportation, a natural water high way, which would be readily substituted. Any attempt to coerce the trade of the back country might be injurious to the interests of Alexandria, and tend to create an unnecessary antagonism between them, and defeat the object in view. The railroad is the property of the country as well as the city to be administered for the benefit of each. If proximity of location and lower rates of transportation cannot attract business to the city. it would be futile to force it by resort to unreasonable discriminations in the way of railroad

In these times of progress, with the compeoutlet to its destination. For the through busto meet the competition of the Virginia Central Railroad at Gordonsville, and the Petershaving connections by steamships with Baltithe Orange line loses the rival lines receive. This class of business does not belong legitimately to Alexandria, but is valuable to the through to Philadelphia and New York, and clusion stated. if Baltimore with its inferior advantages can not arrest it in transitu how can our city, of less means do it? The effort only injures the line of railway without any corresponding advantage to the city. While the Orange railroad should be operated with due regard to the local interests of Alexandria, we must concede it has interests which should not be unnecessarily disturbed. Its large monthly disbursements of bers of his own church, but our citizens genersupplies are of great importance to this community, and perhaps dispense more general benefit in this way than by direct tradeboth the company and the city have a deep interest in the amount received and disbursed, and neither can afford to throw off the sources of supply-but in fact the interests of the city and railroad are the same, and must harmon ize when properly understood. The principal managers of the Orange Railroad reside in our city, are interested in its prosperity, and could have no motive in discriminating against its legitimate trade. The comparative statement of rates to which we have referred above is the best evidence of the fact, and is open to the inspection of all who may desire to see for them-

We have said thus much in vindication of the management of the Orange Company as an act of justice to the parties in itself, and for the reason also that the public has a deep interest in protecting its agents from misrepre sentation, and sustaining them in the path of usually made where capital has most accumulated. The clamor of the undue influence of Baltimore had its origin in the selfishness of other interests seeking to carry the trade from Virginia to Baltimore over their own lines, and secure its profit to themselves. So much of this business as belongs to the location of their road the Orange Company is fairly entitled to receive, and Baltimore may possess the advantage presented, neither more or less, otherwise our own interests are postponed for the benefit of other lines seeking the same trade. As connecting lines, the Baltimore and Ohio, and the Orange and Alexandria have a common interest in the business referred to, and may act in concert for the public convenience. For all that we can see the Orange and Alexandria Railroad is as independent of the Baltimore and Ohio Rail road as any other line of the State is of its im mediate auxiliaries in the transportation of through business.

We do not recoginize any special force in the oft repeated charge against the Orange Company frequently preferred by the press of Richmond and Norfolk, of being operated for the benefit of Baltimore, and of being owned and controlled by Baltimore parties. Upon enquiry we have ascertained that while a large amount of stock is held in Baltimore, four or five times as much is owned in Virginia! Large amounts Owned in Yew York, and these investments are ed and endered upon the discharge of his duties. oc 5-1w A. S. PERPENER, Agent.

Repeated unsuccessful efforts have been hitherto made to clean out and reach the bottom, the U.S., during the war, having fruitlessly expended $6,000 here, resulting only in filling it up with about six feet of dirt, which, of course, has now been all removed. The lock was utterly worthless when the work was commenced, the sills having been in every direction broken; but now there is a durable flooring, which is lined with pitch and sawdust. The Canal Company has also made other repairs on the creek by erecting a fence for sale in Alexandria, which he intends to sell on the west side, from the canal to the river, at prices lower than the same articles can be and floodgates at the mouth of Rock Creek, Spates has now gone to dam great bargains will be sold at figures far below No. 5, about one hundred and six miles from Georgetown, which he intends to make secure against the damage from ice and the freshets of the approaching winter and succeeding spring. The business on the canal is brisk, and there is a surplus of water.

SUNDAY VISITORS.—Quite a large number of "Sunday visitors," from Washington, came down yesterday.
